"SECTION XI

"Clause 1. The court having probate jurisdiction in and for the city of Providence shall be hereafter known as the 'Probate court of the city of Providence.' It shall be holden by one judge, who shall be a member of the bar of the state of Rhode Island, and who shall be elected by the city council; he shall hold regular terms at such times and in such place in said city as may be appointed by ordinance of the city council, and may adjourn his court from time to time. There shall be a clerk of said court, who shall be a member of the bar of the state of Rhode Island and who shall be elected by the city council. The city council at its first regular meeting in November 1959 and at the first regular meeting in November in each sixth year thereafter shall elect a judge and a clerk of the probate court of the city of Providence, respectively, to hold office for the term of six years and until their respective successors are elected and qualify. In the absence or disability of the clerk of said court or during such time as said clerk may be acting as judge of said court, or in the interim between any vacancy in said office and the filling of said vacancy, the deputy clerk of said court shall have all the powers and duties of the clerk of said court, except that such deputy clerk shall not in any circumstances be eligible to act as judge of said court. In case of vacancy in the office of either judge, clerk or deputy clerk of the probate court, whether such vacancy arises because of death, resignation, or for any other reason, like proceedings shall be had to fill such vacancy for the remainder of the unexpired term, as in the case of the original election or appointment of such officers."
