The Providence redevelopment program sets a standard for the rest of the nation.

Today the city of Providence is one of the leaders among the nation's cities which have undertaken substantial renewal projects.

With the help and encouragement of concerned citizens, Providence should continue to be one of the pace-setters in the nation-wide effort toward Urban Renewal.

Here's what's happening on the East Side...

Advertisement

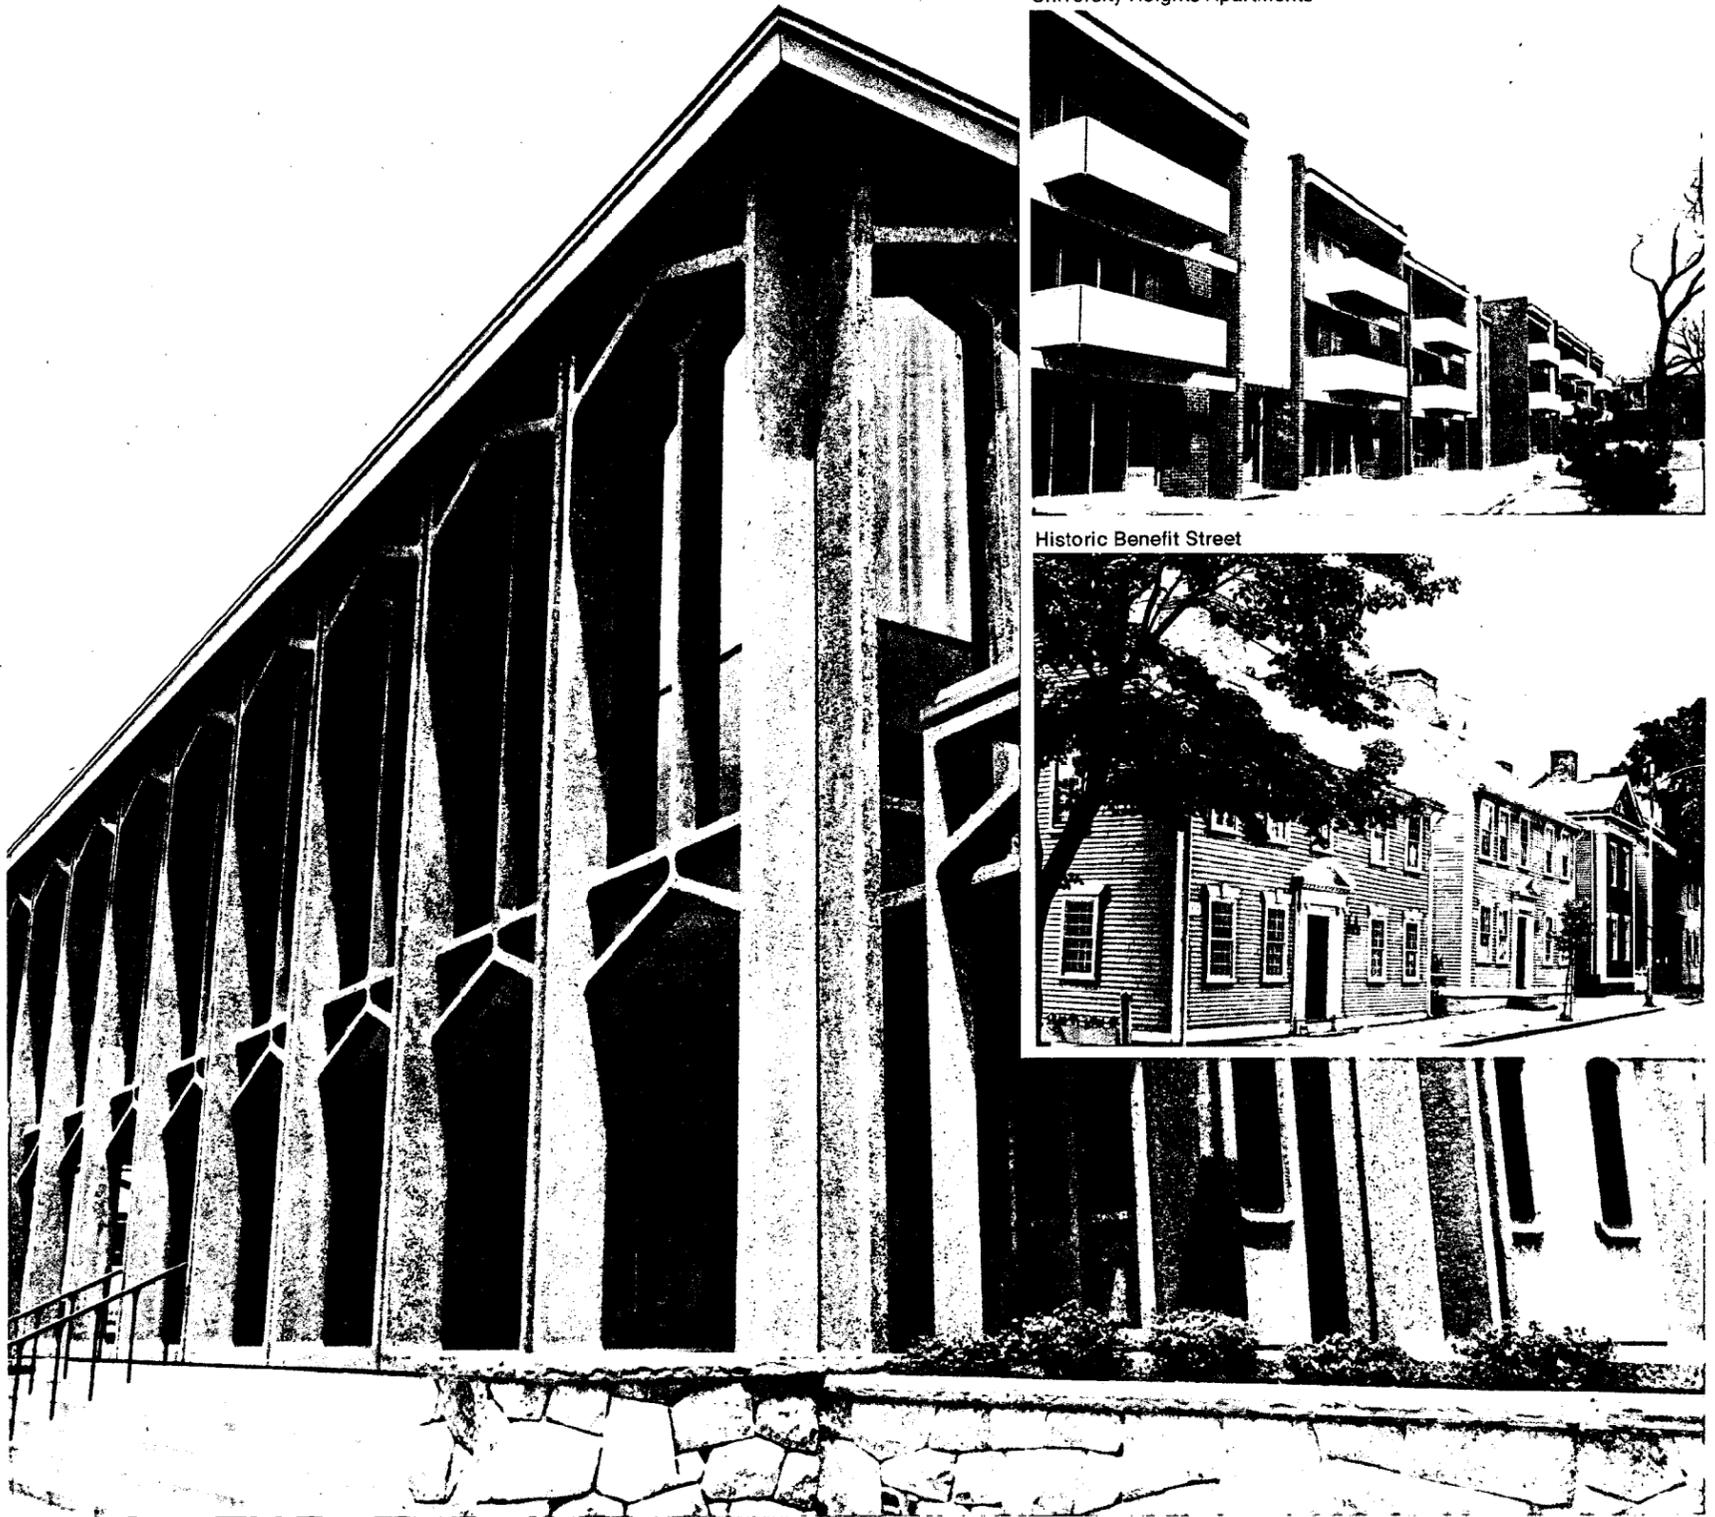

Signs of progress are visible everywhere in Providence — and the East Side is really just a beginning!

As a result of the Loan and Grant Contract signed this year with the Federal Government, complete redevelopment of over 300 acres on Providence's East Side has begun.

The funds from this contract will be used in transforming the Randall Square area into a new 60-acre industrial development that will help to broaden the city's tax base, and for extensive rehabilitation in the Fox Point neighborhood.

Soon the historic Roger Williams Spring will form the center of a new national park across North Main Street from the expanding facilities of the Episcopal Diocese of Rhode Island.

Still more progress has been made in the further development of plans for the redevelopment of the South Main Street and South Water Street areas.

Here's what's happening in the Central-Classical area...

Construction is nearing completion on the James L. Hanley Education Center. Students are expected to begin occupying the handsome new facilities for Classical and Central High Schools during the current school year.

Here's what's happening at Wiggin Village...

The new "planned neighborhood," Wiggin Village, an essential part of the entire Central-Classical Project, is expected to reach completion within the coming year, with over 120 families already residing there. This particular project is an outstanding example of a serious effort by a private (non-profit) sponsor to develop quality housing for low and moderate income families in Providence.

Here's what's happening at Huntington Park...

The Huntington Expressway Industrial Park — also known as the Mashapaug Pond area — has been the site of continued industrial development during this past year.

By the end of 1967, 10 new plants had been completed and occupied, and two more plants are presently nearing completion. All this multiplies the area's tax revenue for the city, as has also been evidenced at West River Industrial Park.

Here's what's happening on Weybosset Hill...

Downtown, spectacular progress has been made on the Weybosset Hill Project. Beneficent House, the Regency, and the new Short Line Garage have been completed and opened for occupancy. The Diocesan Chancery Building and Auditorium, the Holiday Inn Motor Hotel, the new Blue Cross Building, and the City Welfare Building are all occupied or will be ready for tenants within the coming months.

Here's what's happening on Mount Hope and West Broadway...

Major public improvements are planned for Mt. Hope, an area which has been hampered by overcrowding, poor streets and a shortage of recreational facilities for people of all ages.

Extensive rehabilitation and conservation treatment is planned for this entire area, and except for some "spot clearance locations" of a few residential structures, no broadscale relocation and demolition is anticipated.

West Broadway is another area where a thorough program of rehabilitation is planned. Clearance and displacement will be kept to a minimum on this project, with emphasis instead being placed upon the rehabilitation and conservation of existing structures.

Conservation and rehabilitation are keys at Mount Hope.

But progress doesn't just happen

Advertisement

It takes people to make progress happen . . . people who care about the future of their city — people who believe in a thorough redevelopment program as the most effective weapon against the threats posed by overcrowding, deteriorating areas and general decay in the city.

The contents of this annual progress report by the Providence Redevelopment Agency prove that the people of Providence care very much about what's happening to their city — and about the welfare of their fellow citizens.

The Providence Redevelopment Agency is grateful for the generous support given to these vital projects by Mayor Joseph A. Doorley, Jr., the city administration and the people of Providence.

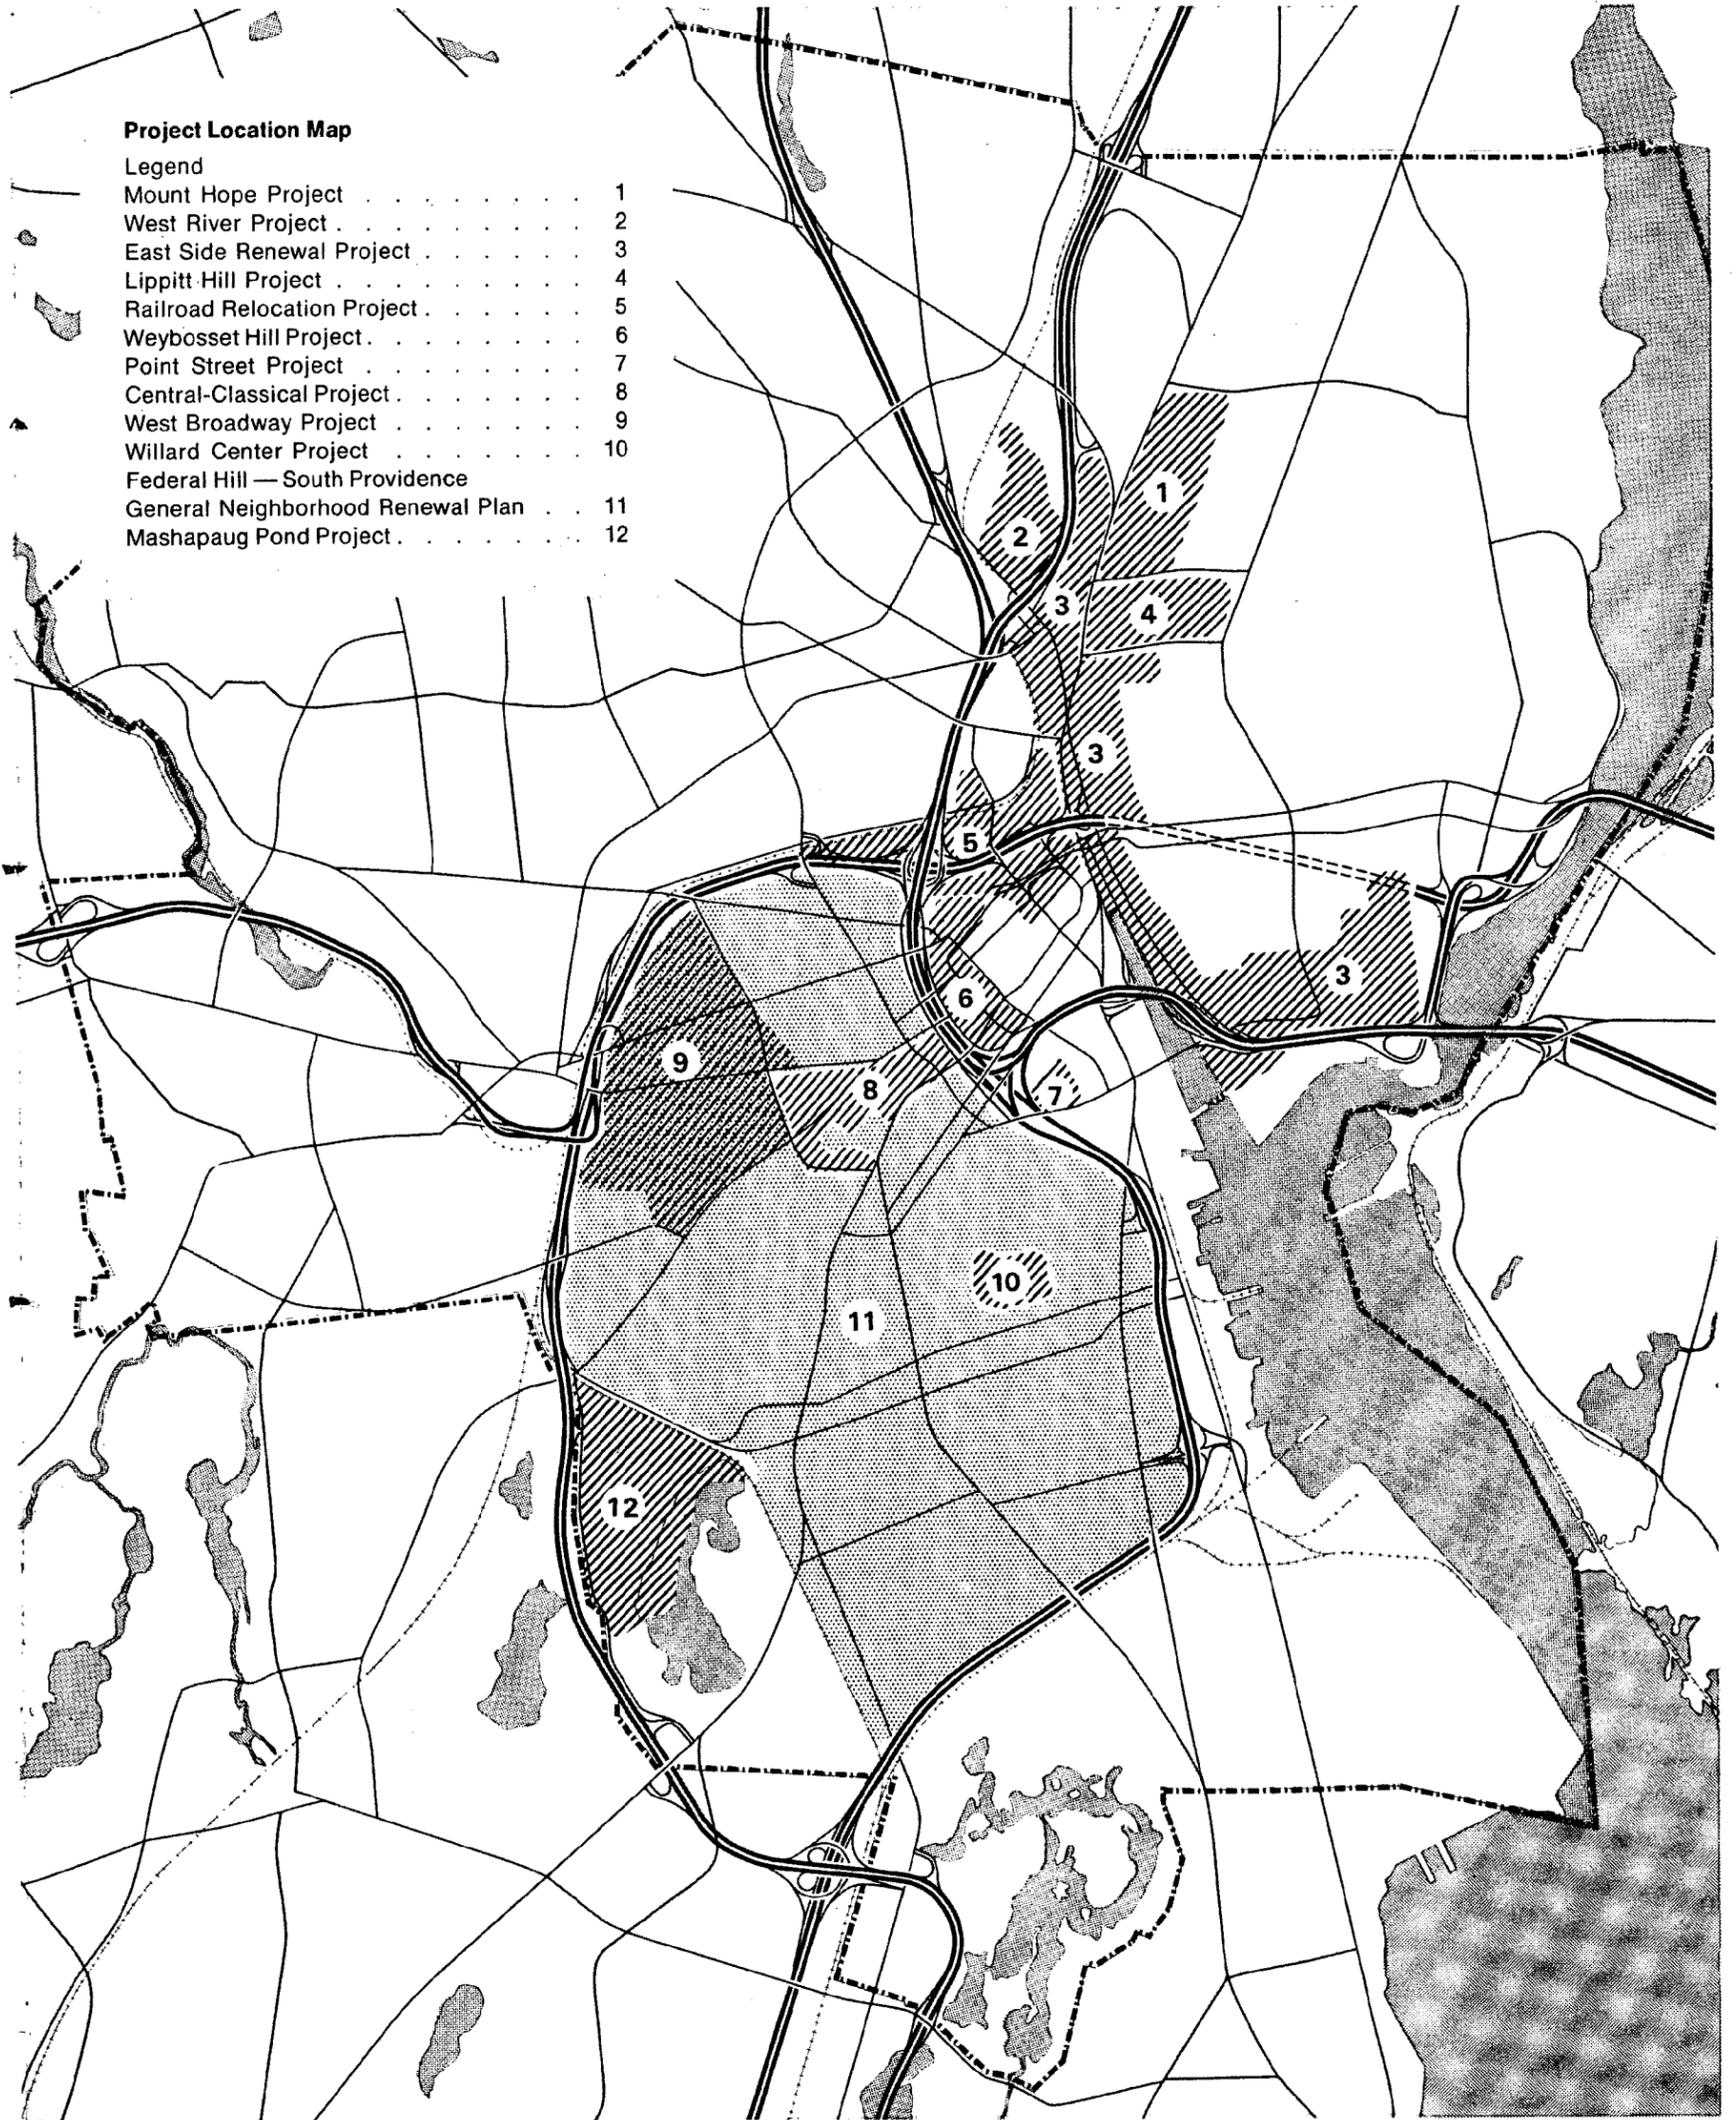

A new face for Providence: Proposed high-rise apartment house at South Main-South Water Streets, extension of the Westminster Mall toward Cathedral Square, and more tot parks in residential areas.

Letter of Transmittal

To the: Honorable Joseph A. Doorley, Jr., Mayor
Honorable City Council
Citizens of Providence

In this, its 20th year of working for urban renewal and rehabilitation in our city, the Providence Redevelopment Agency is pleased to report that 1967 has seen several major building projects carried to the point of completion, or near completion.

Monies from four redevelopment bond issues approved by the voters of Providence are paying the City's share of the cost for all of the projects which have been undertaken. These bonds are self-liquidating through the additional revenue realized from an increased tax base. Specifically these projects include: Point Street, Willard Center I & II, Lippitt Hill, Mashapaug Pond, West River, Central-Classical, Weybosset Hill, the East Side and Mt. Hope.

Now, additional monies are needed to continue rebuilding in the general area covered in the approved General Neighborhood Renewal Plan. Specifically this area includes West Broadway, Federal Hill, Elmwood and South Providence. We believe that the citizens of Providence will wish to give their full support to the continued renewal and growth of their City, not only by approving an essential new bond issue, but by participating in the planning and subsequent private investment which are so necessary to continue the Providence redevelopment programs. These are the programs that will help shape our City's future and provide a significant return without adding to the burden of Providence taxpayers.

The Agency looks forward to serving the Administration and the people in the achievement of a city of which we can be justly proud.
