Resolution Requesting the Providence City Council be committed to addressing the challenges it faces in the local construction industry by enacting necessary and appropriate legislation to protect its proprietary and financial interests and promote the delivery of safe, reliable construction services to the fullest extent possible.

WHEREAS, The City of Providence recognizes that the local construction industry is vital to its economy and execution of essential municipal functions. The strength of this industry impacts the City's ability to successfully carrying out essential infrastructure projects and other public works, and fostering various economic development programs; a strong, reliable construction industry is also needed to fulfill the capital project needs of the private sector when companies consider starting new businesses or re-locating existing facilities from other areas. In addition to these goals, the City has a vested interest in protecting purchasers of construction services from unfair business practices and in ensuring the safe performance of construction operations, which can pose significant dangers to construction workers, as well as the general public; and

WHEREAS, Ensuring a reliable, safe and strong local construction industry is extremely challenging for several reasons, including the fact it is one of the most dangerous of all industries and because due to its inherently temporary and transient nature and also highly competitive; as a result, it can often attract contracting firms that possess poor or marginal qualifications or engage in deceptive and unfair business practices, including those wherein craft labor employees are intentionally misclassified as independent contractors in order to evade various tax obligations. It is also significant that the City of Providence and the State of Rhode Island are experiencing acute and widespread craft labor skill shortages, which are resulting in unprecedented risks to project delivery, including cancelled or delayed projects, defective or inferior quality, major cost overruns and increased construction fatalities; and

WHEREAS, In light of these challenges, which have been in the making for many years but have been exacerbated in recent years, the City of Providence enacted several municipal procurement and development laws designed to protect its proprietary and financial interests in publicly-financed or assisted construction. It also adopted certain public health and welfare ordinances to help generally foster the development of a safer, more reliable construction sector capable of meeting the city's growing needs in public, private and public-private construction projects. Examples of these policies include City code provisions governing:

- (a) Minimum standards, provisions and requirements for safe and stable design, methods of construction and uses of materials in buildings, Sec. 5-1;
- (b) Solicitation and award of public works contracts, including a requirement that public works contractors be affiliated with federally compliant apprenticeship training programs to ensure proper skill levels for construction craft personnel, Sec. 28-28.1; and
- (c) Due diligence standards for economic development projects that require development firms benefiting from municipal tax programs likewise utilize construction firms that are affiliated with federally compliant apprenticeship training programs, Sec. 21-206.

WHEREAS, To address the continuing and growing challenges in the local construction market, the City wishes to enact additional measures to protect its financial and proprietary interests, foster workforce development of the local craft labor workforce and generally improve the safety, reliability and effectiveness of the construction industry by:

- (a) Creating a uniform contractor registration system to verify that contracting firms operating in the both the private and public sectors of the construction industry possess the requisite skills, qualifications and resources to successfully perform the projects they undertake;
- (b) Establishing a prevailing wage policy for construction craft employees on economic development projects assisted through tax stabilization programs pursuant to Sect. 21-262 to help ensure that construction firms performing these projects do not undercut local area wages and pay wage and benefit scales sufficient to attract qualified craft labor to affected projects;
- (c) Reforming additional sections of the City code in policy areas relating to public works procurement, economic development and private sector construction practices as needed to promote the goals of this Resolution.

WHEREAS, The legislative findings set forth in this Resolution are supported by extensive government and industry research and public policy evidence, including information and data contained in the following source materials:
