Re: Educational Programs

Dear Mr. Clement:

Enclosed please find a couple of flyers advertising the ethics training sessions sponsored by the Rhode Island Ethics Commission. As you may know, the Ethics Commission is providing general training sessions about the Code of Ethics on a monthly basis. We hope that public officials and employees who have not had training and those who are interested in a refresher will consider attending. The sessions are interactive with plenty of time to ask questions about how the Code of Ethics impacts public officials and employees in the workplace. I would appreciate your help in reaching more people either by posting a flyer or by distributing it.

We also continue to provide training to specific agencies and departments at both the state and municipal level. Depending on the needs and/or request of a particular agency a number of different members of the Commission's staff are available for educational and training programs. Please feel free to contact me at 222-3790, ext. 29.

Very truly yours,

Renee A. Stadel
Special Assistant/Education Coordinator

ETHICS WORKSHOP

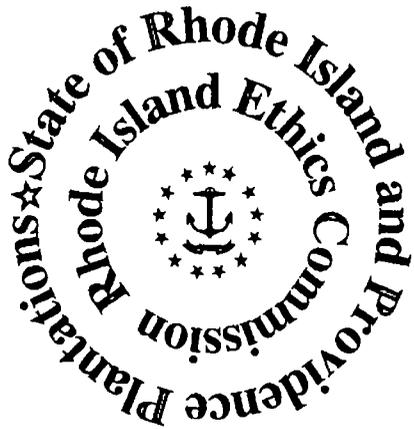

- May a school committee member vote to hire his daughter as a teacher?
- May a water department employee 'moonlight' as a snow plower for the town?
- May a police officer accept gifts from people she helps?
- May a city councilor with a private law practice represent clients before city boards?
- May the town clerk photocopy 1,000 flyers for the soccer association car wash?
