Subj: Resolution of City Council No. 142

The first inspection was made on Nos. 5,7,9 and 11 Western Street in March, 1958. On subsequent inspections a number of outstanding violations on said properties had been corrected.

On a re-inspection in June, 1963, it became known to this department that the dwelling units at 5,7, and 11 Western Street were vacant and notices to secure them were sent to the recorded owner.

All four houses were inspected by the Director and the Assistant Director of this department today. Three of the houses, Nos. 5,7 and 11 are vacant, and improperly secured and are being heavily vandalized. This is a direct violation of the Building Code Ordinance No. 548, Chapter 1643, approved September 8, 1964. A copy of our letter to the Building Inspection Department on these three violations is enclosed.

There is apparant occupancy at 9 Western Street. Since this comes directly under this department's jurisdiction, we are preparing litigation immediately.

Another report on this house to the committee will be forthcoming.

CITY OF PROVIDENCE

DEPARTMENT OF RECREATION

To The Honorable Walter H. Reynolds
Mayor of The City of Providence, and
The Honorable City Council.

Gentlemen:

Once again the Recreation Department is pleased and proud to submit its annual report which will testify to another year of progress and service to the City of Providence.

In June of 1964, Mayor Walter H. Reynolds officially opened a new neighborhood swimming pool in Fox Point. This now means that Providence's swimming facilities not only include four olympic-sized pools, but also two neighborhood pools, and another pool already under construction which will be ready for use in 1965. One of the reasons for the continued excellence of our swimming program is the dedicated leadership of the swimming supervisor, Joseph Watmough, who just this summer received an award from the College Swimming Coaches of America for "outstanding service and contributions to swimming for the past eighteen years".

The new Frederick A. Foley Memorial Field and Playground at Harriet and Sayles Streets including the official Little League field, basketball courts, field house, swings, and tot park area was also opened for use in June of 1964.

The continued expansion and success of the Providence Tennis School resulted in attendance of 953 children and adults which is the largest enrollment in its history.

During the summer of 1964, more than one-hundred South Providence girls had their first experience in camping as a result of an exciting experiment between the Recreation Department and the Girl Scouts of Rhode Island. This free day camp program at the Girl Scout's Camp Cookie was so successful and popular with the girls that we are hoping to expand this program next summer.

Recognition of the Recreation Department's physical fitness program of testing, remedial work, and expert supervision culminated in an award to your Recreation Director by the Rhode Island Junior Chamber of Commerce as the state's outstanding physical fitness exponent.

In addition, another great honor was bestowed upon your Recreation Director in 1963 when he was chosen "Big Brother of The Year".

This past summer, the Recreation Department inaugurated a successful emergency "crash" program for older teen-agers and young adults in troubled inner-city neighborhoods. The program consisted of outdoor basketball for boys and men at Edmund P. Flynn School (South Providence), Roger Williams Housing Project, Danforth Recreation Center-Davis Park, and Thomas Doyle School; also, social indoor activities for youth 16-19 years old at Edmund P. Flynn School and Roger Williams Housing Project Administration Building.

CITY OF PROVIDENCE

Other new summer programs were outdoor basketball for boys at Clarence Street and Columbia Park playgrounds, and an indoor gym and crafts program for boys at Broad Street School.

In September, two very successful gym programs for boys were started in the Bridgham Junior High School and the Kenyon Street School.

It is certainly a great credit to you members of the City Council, and to you, Mayor Reynolds, that we recreation workers and you elected officials have been able to advance together in the spirit of enlightened leadership and progressive support to build one of the outstanding and most professional recreation departments in the entire country. In such an atmosphere of support and desire to serve, the expansion and development of the Providence Recreation facilities and program for our youth and adults will certainly continue to flourish.

Together we can strive toward our constant goal of more service, more facilities, and professional leadership of the highest calibre to assure wholesome enjoyment of leisure time activities for all the people of Providence.

Respectfully submitted,

1964 SUMMER CRASH PROGRAM

In June of 1964, the Providence Recreation Department cooperated with the Providence Human Relations Commission's efforts to lessen the possibility of any major conflict, and to reduce tension in the inner city by supplementing the Recreation Department's existing summer playgrounds, swimming pools, and indoor centers with a special evening program geared to older teen-agers and young adults.

The program consisted of outdoor basketball for boys and men at Edmund P. Flynn School (South Providence), Roger Williams Housing Project, Danforth Recreation Center-Davis Park, and Thomas Doyle School; also, social indoor activities for youth 16-19 years old at Edmund P. Flynn School and Roger Williams Housing Project Administration Building. This new program was received with enthusiasm by the participants as well as by the residents of the various neighborhoods who noticed a welcome decrease in the groups of young people loitering in the yards and streets.

Recreation Director John Cronin provided the best possible leadership for this trial program, because he was aware that leadership would be the most important ingredient for success in attracting participants and maintaining their interest. Therefore, Mr. Cronin assigned some of his outstanding workers who were well known for their knowledge of recreation, as well as their accomplishments in local athletics, such as a former Providence College basketball star, a Steam Roller professional football player, and many varsity high school coaches. The overall supervision was conducted by experienced recreation specialists and field workers.

To this combination of the best possible leadership, easily accessible modern facilities, and good equipment, it was hoped that the participants themselves would supply an added ingredient for success--the contribution of their ideas and preferences for activities indigenous to their neighborhoods which would result in a sustaining, popular, and dynamic program.

In this way, the Providence Recreation Department hopes and believes that its new program will be instrumental in providing the younger population with a wholesome use of restless leisure hours afforded by warm evenings.

Other summer recreation activities already in progress before the crash program began were outdoor basketball intramurals for boys at Clarence Street and Columbia Park Playgrounds; indoor programs at Benefit Street Recreation Center and Broad Street School for boys, and a co-recreational program at the Fox Point Recreation Center.

CITY OF PROVIDENCE

DEPARTMENT OF RECREATION

New programs started in September include boys gym activities at Bridgham Junior High School and Kenyon Street Elementary School.

If the summer of 1964 goes down in history as one of violence and discontent in many cities, we can be pleased and proud that here in the City of Providence, the "long hot summer" was spent in cooperation, understanding, and progress.

SOUTH PROVIDENCE GIRLS GO CAMPING

During the summer of 1964, more than 100 South Providence girls between the ages of seven and thirteen had their first exciting experience in camping at the Girl Scout's Camp Cookie in Glocester, Rhode Island.

The Providence Recreation Department and the Girl Scouts of Rhode Island cooperated in an experimental free day camp program to give each girl a one-week introduction to woodland fun during the last two weeks in August.

As our part of the program, the Recreation Department publicized the camp at the playgrounds and registered the girls. The only requirement for attending camp was a medical examination, which the Recreation Department arranged in cooperation with the Providence Health Department. We also provided bus transportation each day, and one adult supervisor on each bus.

The Girl Scouts provided the camp site and equipment, most of the staff, and food for one cookout each week.

At first, it was not certain if these girls in this inner-city area of South Providence, where most of them had never been in the woods before, would respond to an invitation to attend camp. And, furthermore, if they did, would they enjoy it?

Happily, the response was excellent with 42 registered for the first week, and 62 for the second week. Also, all indications are that the girls enjoyed the camp a great deal. And, in spite of the doubts that the girls would be unable and unwilling to attend regularly, they were there faithfully each day.

Credit for the success of the program must be shared with the eighteen Senior Scouts, who provided much of the leadership as volunteer program aides.

Many of the campers who had never been to any camp before were very impressed and excited when they saw their first snakes and frogs on nature hikes, and when they made their first trip to a farm. They were shown that living, cooking, and eating out-of-doors can be done in a neat and clean manner.

Both the Girl Scout leaders and the Recreation Department agree that this happy experiment was aimed simply at exposing these South Providence girls to camping, and giving them a good time. If scouting benefits from the good words the girls spread among their families and friends, it will be a wonderful and unplanned for bonus.

However, the Providence Recreation Department and Girl Scouts are hoping to repeat and perhaps expand this program next year, since both agree that these Providence girls who went to camp most certainly have derived unforeseen benefits in addition to the wholesome self-expression resulting from this enriching camping experience.

PROVIDENCE CHILDREN CONTRIBUTE TO THE JIMMY FUND

Each summer, thousands of Providence youngsters and their leaders on the city's playgrounds have devoted their efforts and time to raising contributions for the Children's Cancer Fund.

For the eighth consecutive year, the Providence Recreation Department dedicated one entire week of its playground season to the Jimmy Fund. All types of special events such as field days, carnivals, baseball games, talent shows, pet shows, cake sales, Boys Camp Days, auctions, and swimming meets have been presented by the children, assisted by the recreation staff and some parents.

Since it began in 1956, the Providence children's Jimmy Fund Drive has been a great success and very meaningful to our youth who were proud and pleased to help "Jimmy". With the completion of the 1964 drive, the Providence children have donated an amazing total of $29,227.45 to the Jimmy Fund.

One important reason for the great success of the Providence Children's Jimmy Fund Drive is that more than sixty playground supervisors and other recreation personnel have willingly given their time and effort to motivate and lead these boys and girls in their worthy cause--to help children stricken with this dreaded disease, cancer.

Anyone who has seen the happy and unselfish way our Providence boys and girls have worked for the Children's Cancer Fund must certainly agree with us when we say that it is an honor to work with them as they strive to help boys and girls not as fortunate as they.
