Providence, R. I.

Gentlemen:

I am pleased to transmit herewith the Annual Report of the City Plan Commission for the fiscal year ended September 1966.

During the past year the Commission approved for publication three Master Plan Reports that had been in preparation during the previous year under a 701 Project. These included Recreation and Conservation, Public Schools and Circulation.

Other parts of the same 701 Project, including a photogrammetric mapping program, data bank feasibility study were placed under consultant contracts, and work was started on the first phase of neighborhood analysis.

Approval of the General Neighborhood Renewal Plan, completed early in the fiscal year, was received from the regional office of H.U.D.

The Commission wishes to express its appreciation for the splendid cooperation extended by the various city departments that contributed to the program and planning outlined in this report.

Very truly yours,

I. INTRODUCTION

City planning in Providence dates from December 2, 1913 when the Providence City Council created one of the first City Plan Commissions in the United States. Substantially reorganized under new legislation in 1944, and provided a full-time professional staff, the Commission has continued a pace-setting program in planning for the future development of the City.

As of the closing of this 1965-1966 fiscal year, the Commission awaits new organizational and administrative changes which will combine planning, renewal, housing and allied City operations within a new department. In a society and urban environment of ever increasing complexity, the coordination of separate but related functions is expected to provide new thrust to a program already well into its second half-century of innovation and leadership.

Staff vacancies remaining unfilled pending final decisions upon reorganization, and assignment of certain staff personnel to new municipal programs outside the planning field, currently finds the Commission staff at approximately half-strength. Nevertheless, the accomplishments of the past year presented briefly in the following pages, are considerable, even recognizing that in important instances they represent the culmination of study and action programs originating in a prior year.

In commencing upon a new year, we look forward to new opportunities for service in the building and rebuilding of Providence.

11. MASTER PLANNING

Recreation and Conservation Master Plan

On October 28, 1965 the Commission approved the Master Plan for Public Recreation and Conservation. More comprehensive in approach than the Master Plan for Playgrounds and Playfields published in 1953, the new master plan examines recreational opportunities in Providence very broadly, including active and passive uses, conservation of unimproved open space, and the establishment of multi-use neighborhood centers.

Recognizing that cost and space are important factors in an older, largely built-up city, the Plan places a heavy emphasis upon improving and extending the usefulness of existing recreation areas. Facility types recommended extend from the playlot for pre-school children to the establishment of neighborhood parks for the increasing number of elder citizens.

A total capital cost of $13,192,000 is proposed within this Plan. Of this amount $4,936,000 is school-connected, and is therefore included also in the financing schedule in the School Master Plan. The remaining $8,256,000 represents independent recreation proposals. Priorities are divided into pre-1970 and pre-1980 periods.

School Master Plan

Also on October 28, 1965 the Commission approved the Master Plan for Public Schools replacing an earlier master plan element for public school sites developed in 1950.

The Master Plan for Public Schools presents an analysis of pupil population trends, of curriculum development as it affects the physical requirements for school plant, and projects and "early" phase and "later" phase for new school construction to supplement and extend the considerable development achieved under the 1950 proposals.

Excluding the $4,936,000 of school-connected recreation referred to previously, the School Master Plan proposes future investment of $23,117,000 in addition to currently on-going projects amounting to $11,151,000.

Circulation Master Plan

On November 12, 1965 the Commission approved the Master Plan for Circulation. Begun in 1964, it was undertaken for the purpose of updating the Master Plan for Thorofares originally adopted in 1946. The new circulation plan evolved through the use of the latest techniques in the use of computer models to forecast highway volumes, and to analyze future highway needs.

In addition to the state and federal expressway systems, which in final location are patterned closely after the 1946 proposals, the Plan also provides for a complete arterial street system designed to supplement expressways within the City area. Recommendations for a ten-year construction program at an estimated cost of approximately $12,000,000 are contained in the Plan.

Downtown Master Plan

During the course of the year the Commission corresponded with the Rhode Island Chapter of the A.I.A. in connection with the Downtown Master Plan. The Chapter has established a Subcommittee on the Downtown Providence Master Plan for the purpose of contributing suggestions and ideas in a continuing planning process for the downtown area.

III. PROJECT PLANNING AND COORDINATION

East Side Renewal Project

On July 23, 1965 the Commission received for review the Part I proposals for the East Side Renewal Plan. The project consists of an area two miles long and containing 343 acres. It comprises the renewal area proposed in the College Hill Study, the Randall Square area adjacent to Constitution Hill at the northern end of the project, and that section of the Fox Point area east of Hope Street.

Proposals include establishment of the Roger Williams National Memorial between Canal and North Main Streets, a combination of new construction and restoration of residential and commercial structures planned for the South Main Street section, development of a historic trail running the length of Benefit Street, clearance and redevelopment of virtually all of Randall Square for industrial and commercial reuse, expansion of facilities for religious institutions in the Constitution Hill - North Benefit Street Section, limited new construction, large-scale rehabilitation and restoration in the North Benefit and Fox Point Sections, and expansion of recreation facilities in the vicinity of Fox Point. The net project cost was estimated at $27,493,000.

Reviewed for both conformity to master plan elements, and as to necessity and desirability, the project was approved on all counts by unanimous vote of members present.

Railroad Relocation Project

On July 28, 1966 the Commission reviewed the Railroad Relocation Project. This project consists of approximately 71 acres within the downtown area including the present city hall and extending generally east and southeast.

Project objectives include regrouping of scattered governmental services, encouraging investment of private capital and strengthening of the City's tax base, improved traffic flow into and through the project, esthetic improvement of the center city environment to attract an increased public use of facilities, and elimination of obsolete and blighting railroad structure creating an opportunity for replacement of all rail passenger facilities in a new passenger station. The net project cost was estimated at $14,541,000.

Reviewed for conformity to master plan elements and as to the project's necessity and desirability, it was approved by unanimous vote of members present.

General Neighborhood Renewal Plan

On November 12, 1965 the Commission approved a General Neighborhood Renewal Plan for the Federal Hill-South Providence Renewal Area as being in conformity with the Master Plan for the City of Providence. Encompassing approximately 2,000 acres, or seventeen percent of the City's land area, the various sections have been designated as Federal Hill East, Federal Hill West, West End, Upper South Providence, Lower South Providence, Upper Elmwood and Lower Elmwood. Six of the eight areas are scheduled for maximum rehabilitation, with varying amounts of clearance of the most dilapidated structures. The Lower Elmwood area will be treated as a code enforcement project to protect it against deterioration. The Eddy Street area will be studied for possible industrial development.

Approval of credit-pooling operations within this General

Neighborhood Renewal Plan area was received from the federal government April 15, 1966.

Expansion of Redevelopment Areas

On August 25, 1966 the Commission considered and approved an expansion of the areas designated as redevelopment areas, specifically in connection with the East Side Renewal Project. Under state and federal laws the Providence Redevelopment Agency can function only in areas so designated. An amendment to the existing ordinance incorporating the several changes involved was adopted by the City Council on November 3, 1966 and approved by the Mayor on November 7, 1966.

IV. PLANNING TOOLS AND ACTION PROGRAMS

701 Assistance Program

On March 8, 1966 approval was received for a planning grant application which was submitted during the previous year. This is a four-part program, designated R.I. P-23, which includes: a feasibility study for a data bank, a photogrammetric and mapping survey on a city-wide basis, the completion and reproduction of master plan elements for schools, recreation and circulation, and a first phase development of a neighborhood planning study. The estimated cost of this composite undertaking is $272,748 of which $204,561 is the federal three-fourths share, and $68,187 is the one-fourth local share. At the year's end the data bank study was underway with a $70,000 contract with a New York firm of computer-use specialists; the photogrammetric and mapping survey was being undertaken through a $110,000 contract with a large engineering firm headquartered in Providence; and work on the master plan elements had resulted in a contract for the printing of the first of the three master plan reports.

Green Acres Program

During the year staff personnel of the Commission worked on a number of applications for state financial assistance under the Green Acres Program, a fund of $5,000,000 of which Providence has been allocated $257,997 on a matching basis. Priority on January 13, 1966 was given five locations consistent with recommendations of the Master Plan for Recreation and Conservation.

BOR Program

On January 27, 1966 the Commission considered and agreed by resolution to accept and abide by the General Provisions of the federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation. It was reported at that meeting that seven projects were to be submitted for BOR matching funds. Applications were to be undertaken by a member of the Providence Redevelopment Agency staff and developed in conformity to the Master Plan for Recreation and Conservation.

Capital Improvement Program

The Capital Improvement Program, consisting of a capital budget for the first year, and a capital financing program for the five years next succeeding, is a joint responsibility of the Commission and the Finance Director.

On December 9, 1965, the Commission approved a Capital Improvement Program for 1965-1971 amounting to $100,614,260 of which the City's share will be $54,166,889. The total capital budget for 1965-1966 is $15,746,899.

Primarily this program is a method for coordinating the various requests from departments for capital funds for municipal improvements. Determination of priorities is based upon relative urgency, relationship to other projects and availability of funds. The program was developed with a view to keying all projects into relevant federal and state financial assistance programs, and ultimately into a data bank function.

Zoning Revision Study

On September 29, 1966, the Commission approved a proposed new zoning ordinance for submission to the City Council. Begun in June of 1964, it was financed in part by a 701 Grant (R.I.P-17) of $94,515 and a local share of $31,505.

Carefully structured, it employs new zoning techniques developed since the present ordinance was drafted in 1948 and is intended to recognize dynamic community changes since the earlier date. Among its "innovations" are the zoning of residences upon a density rather than dwelling type concept (FAR), an institutional zone for hospitals and colleges occupying large land areas, a planned development zone to encourage new investment through design flexibility, regulation of industrial development through performance standards for industrial zones, and provision of new administrative procedures under a zoning administrator.

In conjunction with the foregoing, but not a part of R.I. P-17, was a new zoning enabling act, upon which work was substantially completed. Submission of this draft act through the City Council to the Rhode Island General Assembly is anticipated in the forthcoming year.
