Dear Ms. Mendonca:

Your recent letter to the President of the United States was referred to the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA). Your letter transmitted a copy of Resolution No. 384 which states in part "Be it further resolved, that the Federal Government increase the activities of the Drug Enforcement Administration so as to stop the flow of heroin into the United States..."

DEA shares your concern regarding the impending threat of increased trafficking of Southwest Asian heroin into the United States. For the first time in more than 3½ years, the heroin purity indicator has moved upward indicating an increase in the overall availability of heroin in the United States.

Throughout 1979, Western Europe served as a "sponge," absorbing the increased production of Southwest Asian heroin production. Despite sincere attempts by the European Government to control this problem, the situation has continued to worsen. It is feared that the European market will soon be saturated, leading to increased trafficking of Southwest Asian heroin into the United States.

Given the magnitude of these possible developments, the question then becomes, "What plans are there for coping with this new presence and accelerating problem?" Unfortunately, there are no easy answers.

The United States Government has developed initiatives to attack the Southwest Asian heroin problem. The Administration is making the Southwest Asian heroin effort a high priority and is coordinating efforts of the Departments of Justice, State, Treasury, Defense, and Health and Human Services.

On February 28, 1980, President Carter and Attorney General Civiletti hosted approximately 120 law enforcement officials including all State Attorneys General and several police chiefs and prosecutors. At this meeting, a 5-point program addressing the threat of Southwest Asian heroin was discussed with these enforcement officials and their cooperation and participation were encouraged.

DEA has established the Special Action Office/Southwest Asian heroin. SAO/SWA, as this office is known, was established to meet the imposing threat of renewed heroin production, transshipment, and trafficking in and from Europe, the Middle East, and parts of Southwest Asia's opium producing countries. SAO/SWA will address this serious situation on both the European and North American continents in a coordinated and directed high-priority enforcement effort.

DEA will continue to place a high priority on intelligence and enforcement activities - internationally and domestically - and is fully committed to reducing the availability of Southwest Asian heroin in the United States. The total efforts of all concerned U.S. and European elements, however, can only be fully effective if these efforts, along with those of Pakistani and Afghan officials, result in increased narcotics control at the source.

I hope the above information will be of value to you.

Sincerely,
