PERSONAL EXPRESSION

COUNCILMAN IGLIOZZI requests the privilege of the floor to speak on a point of personal expression and states:

I have some concerns and had requested what we have is a democracy and we haven't had a chance to take action on the Mayor's Veto. The City Council takes action, the action goes before the Mayor and he either signs it into law or he doesn't. From the day the mayor receives the action of the Council we have 30 days to act. This is the second council meeting that the Tax Stabilization is not going to be heard and we must wait until the next council meeting. The Mayor's Veto is being upheld. What is at stake is the Council's power to act. This is about the city council's prerogative and by not putting it on the agenda, the prerogative is lost. That is how it happens. This is part of the democracy. If Congress passes something and it goes back to the President and the President overrides it, the Congress doesn't have the right not to bring the Veto back to the Congress. I have put a letter in requesting . . . We had debate on this matter, it was contested and that was not the end of it. It comes down to the Mayor signing it or not. I understand there was a three page letter attached to the Veto by the Mayor and as a councilperson, I have the right to receive that reply. I have a right to receive it and the people of Providence and the business community have a right to know if there is or isn't a tax stabilization. I will read into the record what the Mayor wrote in his letter:

"The Honorable Michael R. Clement
City Clerk
City Hall
Providence, Rhode Island 02903

Dear Mr. Clerk:

Pursuant to Sections 302(f) and 412 of the Providence Home Rule Charter, I hereby disapprove and veto the Resolution passed November 4, 1999 by the City Council of the City of Providence relative to a three month moratorium on tax stabilizations in the City of Providence. As I reflect on how far we have come as a city, I implore you not to stall the momentum we have worked so hard to achieve.

I remember when I took over as Mayor of Providence, businesses were fleeing this city. I remember being inaugurated and watching them move the piano out of the Biltmore Hotel as it closed their doors. Today, we are building several new hotels. Tax stabilizations helped make those projects economically feasible in an urban environment.

I remember watching retail escape to the suburbs. Today, we witness the newest mall in the country attracting thousands of people to discover our city on a daily basis. In one generation, we recaptured our retail market and in fact, surpassed the amount of retail we have ever had in this city. A tax stabilization made that possible.

People were skeptical when I talked of creating an arts and entertainment district in the "Downcity" and a downtown neighborhood consisting of converted buildings into live/work spaces. The upper floors of a former commercial building, the Smith building, sat underutilized and vacant for years. Today, that building is home to many artists and young professionals, who breathe new life to the inner core of our city. The costly conversion of that commercial building to residential living could not have been feasible without a tax stabilization program. The O'Gorman building on Westminster Street, another building with vacant upper floors for over twenty years, is prepared to go forward with housing. The only step left to take was the tax treaty.

The majority of tax stabilizations, however, are not for projects in the downtown area. In fact, most have been in the neighborhoods. Of the approximately thirty treaties we have done since 1984, approximately twenty have been in the neighborhoods. It is crucial to have this important economic tool available to us as we attract businesses into our neighborhoods. For example, in the Silver Spring Industrial Park, through tax stabilizations we were able to attract two businesses.

We have finally succeeded by making this city attractive to many industries, including but not limited, to retail, tourism and financial services. Many factors have contributed to this success. We now hear from businesses looking to locate in the city that the quality of life here is helpful in recruiting professionals.

My administration works hard to negotiate treaties which give the taxpayer . . .".

COUNCIL PRESIDENT LOMBARDI informs COUNCILMAN IGLIOZZI that the allotted five minute time limit has run out.
